The Overseas Development Institute (ODI) is an independent, non-government body aiming to promote wise action in the field of overseas development. It was set up in 1960 and is financed by donations from British business and by grants from British and American foundations and other sources. Its policies are determined by its Council.

The functions of the Institute are:

1 to provide a centre for research in development issues and problems, and to conduct studies of its own;

2 to be a forum for the exchange of views and information among those, in Britain and abroad, who are directly concerned with overseas development in business, in government, and in other organizations;

3 to keep the urgency of development issues and problems before the public and the responsible authorities.

The Institute has a mailing list open to anyone interested in development. Information on studies and offprints is issued regularly. Catalogues and publications are obtainable from:

Chairman’s Statement

In completing my first year as chairman, I am very conscious of the debt we all owe to my predecessor, Mr. Trevor Peppercorn. He took over in 1967 from our first chairman, the late Sir Leslie Rowan, and for five years he gave generously of his time in the wise guidance of the Institute’s affairs. We are fortunate in retaining his lively interest and support as a member of the Council and its Executive Committee.

As this report shows, 1972 was another active year for ODI, and 1973 should see the publication of much valuable work. The past year was notable also for the highest number of applicants and awards in the ODI Fellowship scheme—under which young development economists are selected for two years’ service with African governments—and for the appointment of the first female Fellows.

ODI’s most important function is ‘to provide a centre for research in development issues and problems’. We aim to relate our research to important policy questions, and so a major element in judging our work must be its relevance to such questions. Among the wide range of subjects covered by our research programme, there are two which I believe to be particularly significant at this time.

One is the joint programme with Reading University, directed by Guy Hunter and launched in response to the difficulties, encountered throughout the developing world, in the implementation of agricultural development policies designed to assist the small farmers who make up so large a part of the population. It starts from the premise that the difficulties and varying problems of farming communities, in their transition from a traditional to a modern agricultural economy, have been largely neglected in choosing the administrative and institutional methods for implementing development policies—e.g. credit systems, co-operatives, extension services. Its main object is to analyse the ‘fit’ between farmer attitudes, capacities, and needs at a given point in the transition on the one hand, and the administrative and institutional methods used on the other, and so evolve better criteria for the choice of methods in each case. I believe that the results of this programme could have a crucial and long overdue influence on policy making for agricultural development. Indeed, this is already happening, as is shown by the very high level of participation at the conference recently held in New Delhi under the programme’s auspices. It is particularly appropriate that Guy Hunter’s distinguished work in this field should have been recognized in the New Year Honours with the award of CMG ‘for services to developing countries’.
The other notable programme involves our EEC policy studies. Few current issues are so complex or important in their implications for developing countries as the enlargement of the Community and the resulting offer or denial of association to members of the Commonwealth. ODI's work in this area started in 1971, with an international conference and report on Britain, the EEC and the Third World.

A study of the trade predicament of Commonwealth Asia, following enlargement, was published in March 1973 under the title The Seven Outside, and there will be two further publications this year dealing with aid and trade issues for the Associates and associables. A longer-term study of the processes by which the Community formulates its policies towards the Third World will appear in 1974. A further link with evolving Community policies is now provided by the appointment of ODI's Director, Antony Tasker, as a member of the Economic and Social Committee of the EEC.

It is very important, I believe, that ODI should obtain the resources necessary to develop its work in this area in association with institutes on the Continent. Many of the proposals for developing the EEC impinge on Third World interests, and there is a clear role for ODI in putting the issues and problems which arise before the public and the responsible authorities.

Taken together with our studies of British aid, of African enterprise, and of aid administration, these programmes illustrate the continuing scope and need for research for which the Institute is particularly well fitted. And we acknowledge gratefully the project finance from many sources which makes them possible. Even more vital, however, is the general core finance upon which ODI depends to maintain its essential capability. Without this it would be impossible to develop the proposals to attract project finance, or to complete and publish our work. This is the finance, also, which enables ODI to maintain a documentation centre and to arrange discussion meetings and conferences. The sources of general finance have been five-year grants from the Ford Foundation (worth £20,000 in 1972); donations from British business (£14,000 in 1972); and contributions from British trusts and voluntary agencies (£6,000 p.a.), IBRD and UNDP (totalling £10,750 in 1972). To these will now be added a two-year grant of £10,000 p.a. from the Overseas Development Administration, starting in April 1973. Taken together, they account for about half our estimated revenue in 1973, instead of the two-thirds which we believe necessary. And half of this general finance is represented by grants from the Ford Foundation and ODA which expire in March 1975.
As previous statements have made clear, the level of our general finance has been declining as a proportion of total revenue. We now need to reverse this trend, if ODI is to continue both to carry out the range of functions for which it was established, and to attract project finance for its research. We shall be making a determined effort this year to increase our general finance, and I am confident of generous support for an institute which has earned an international reputation as a leading centre of research and information on development issues.

During the year we were sorry to lose the services of Lord Franks, who had been a valued member of our Council since 1961. As additional members we welcome Dr. F. J. Llewellyn, Director-General, The British Council; Mr. Paul Streeten, Warden of Queen Elizabeth House, Oxford; Mr. George Bishop, Chairman of Booker McConnell; Mr. John Pinder, Director of Political and Economic Planning; and Mr. Richard Kershaw, of BBC Television. They bring a wealth of valuable experience in many fields.

After nine years with ODI, Andrzej Krassowski has left to take up a post with the United Nations in New York; and we have lost the full-time services of Marigold Hutton, who has been an anchor member of the staff since 1964. We welcome Anthony Bottrall, from Hunting Technical Services, as Assistant Director of the Reading/ODI programme; David Jones, who has joined us from service with the Government of Tanzania to undertake studies of the European Development Fund and of British aid to Botswana, Lesotho, and Swaziland; and Edith Hodgkinson, formerly Praeger's London acquisitions editor, as our publications and conference officer.

We have examined the above balance sheet and annexed income and expenditure account. In our opinion these comply with the Companies Acts, 1948 and 1967, and give respectively a true and fair view of the state of affairs of the Company at 31st December 1972, and of the excess of income over expenditure for the year to that date.

Report of the Council

To be presented at the THIRTEENTH Annual General Meeting

The Council has pleasure in presenting the Accounts of the Institute for the year ended 31 December 1972. An innovation is the Schedule of Income and Expenditure on Grants and Projects. The ODI Fellowship scheme has been included, although direct expenditure on allowances and passages for Fellows has not been brought into the main Income and Expenditure Account. Thus, it can be seen that reimbursable expenditure on Fellows was £18,827, whilst the central overheads and administrative expenditure was £6,916, bringing gross expenditure on the scheme to £25,743 during the year. Similarly, the grants from the Overseas Development Administration, for example, standing at £21,720, are shown to exclude £15,183 direct expenditure on Fellows, and to be composed of £4,724 central expenditure on the scheme; £10,480 for the Reading University/ODI Rural Development Programme; £1,162 for the study on the Effects on Commonwealth Asia of Trade Preferences in an Enlarged European Community; and £5,354 for the study of Indigenous Entrepreneurship in Africa.

Grants in arrear standing at £21,882 at 31 December 1972 exceeded the grants received in advance at £12,108, but this adverse balance was temporary and by 31 January 1973, when claims to December had been received, the situation was reversed.

Income from donations and Deeds of Covenant fell from £22,001 in 1971 to £20,158 in 1972 but the Institute intends to appeal for a renewal of support in 1973. However, the increase in Grants and Project Finance from £60,514 to £80,487 was a notable feature of the year.

Expenditure on salaries and research increased from £42,859 to £49,659. This was due to the recruitment of two additional research officers, together with a general revision of salaries necessitated by the rise in the cost of living. Rent and rates, at £14,245, reflected the cost of the new premises at 10-11 Percy Street for a full year, compared with the figure of £12,075 for 1971 which included only five months at the new level. Similarly, the increase in General Office Expenses from £1,745 to £2,920 was because there was a resident cleaner in the previous offices, whose remuneration was included under salaries, but a firm of office cleaners now has to be employed at a cost of £1,000 per annum under general expenses.
Under the terms of the office lease there is a break clause in 1977, and the landlord is entitled to repossess the premises for his own use. It was therefore decided in 1972 that £12,000 per annum should be placed in special reserve to meet this contingency, but the accounts show that at the end of the year only £11,000 was available for transfer.

Council

Mr. Ronald Archer, Lord Blackett, Lord Caradon, Mr. Geoffrey Chandler, Mr. Victor Feather, Lady Jackson, Sir Arthur Norman, Lord Redcliffe-Maud, Sir Eric Roll, Mr. Dudley Seers, and Lord Walston retire in rotation, in accordance with the Articles of Association and all, being eligible, offer themselves for re-election.

Mr. George Bishop, Mr. Richard Kershaw, Dr. Frederick Llewellyn, Mr. John Finder and Mr. Paul Streeten, having been appointed during the year, automatically cease to hold office and offer themselves for election.

Auditors

Statutory Information

1 Principal Activities of the Institute—to provide a centre for research in development issues and problems and to conduct studies of its own; to be a forum for the exchange of views and information among those who are directly concerned with overseas development; and to keep the urgency of the problems before the public and the responsible authorities.

2 The Institute is a Company Limited by Guarantee, not having a share capital. It is a non-profit-making registered charity. Members' liability is limited to £1 per head. It is not a Trading Company.

3 Council Members serve in an honorary capacity and receive no emoluments. They do not have contracts of service nor do they have a financial interest in the Institute.

4 The following served on the Council for all, or part of, the year to which the Accounts refer:—

Lord Seebohm (Chairman), Mr. Ronald Archer, Mr. Richard Bailey, Mr. John Beevor, Sir Kenneth Berrill, Lord Blackett, the Rev. Alan Booth, Lord Boyle, Lord Campbell of Eskan, Lord Caradon, Mr. Geoffrey Chandler, Mr. Michael Clapham, Mr. Ian Cox, Mr. Alan Dutton, Mr. Victor Feather, Lord Franks, Sir Arthur Gaitskell, Sir William Gorell Barnes, Sir John Henniker-Major, Dr. Paul Howell, Professor Sir Joseph Hutchinson, Lady Jackson, Dr. F. Cyril James, Mr. Arthur Knight, Professor Ian Little, Dr. Frederick Llewellyn, Sir Arthur Norman, Sir Duncan Oppenheim, Mr. Trevor Peppercorn, Sir Ronald Prain, Lord Redcliffe-Maud, Professor Austin Robinson, Sir Eric Roll, Mr. Dudley Seers, Mr. Andrew Shonfield, Mr. Paul Streeten, Mr. Donald Tyerman, Lord Walston, Mr. John Whitehorn, Sir Geoffrey Wilson, and Sir Kenneth Younger.

5 No donations were made to other charities or for political purposes.

On behalf of the Council

1 Studies

Rural development
The Reading University/ODI joint research programme on agricultural development overseas entered its third year of operation. The six studies by Indian research institutions were completed on schedule and formed the basis of a Conference held under the auspices of the Indian Ministry of Agriculture in New Delhi in December (see page 23). Guy Hunter, the Programme Director, visited India in January and again in October, when discussions were held with the local research directors and the central management committee in Delhi about first drafts of the studies and arrangements for the forthcoming Conference.

Mr. Hunter also visited East Africa in February, when he had discussions with the Kenya Ministry of Agriculture and Christopher Trapman, who continued his study of the administration of agricultural programmes in Kenya, due for completion in mid-1973. In Nigeria, a research team at the University of Ibadan (Dr. Q. B. O. Anthonio and Dr. A. U. Patel) started work in July on a study of the organization of services to maize and rice farmers in Western Nigeria. Work also began at the University of Ife (Dr. C. A. Osuntogun) on a study of the 'fit' at village level between externally organized developmental institutions and the indigenous pattern of institutions and customary behaviour.

In June, Anthony Bottrall joined ODI as Assistant Director of the Programme, with responsibilities for general research on service cooperatives and credit institutions. Soon after joining, he visited several British universities engaged in research of interest to the programme and in October went to Rome for discussions and an exchange of information with FAO. He also accompanied Mr. Hunter to Beirut in December to establish contact with research institutions and other organizations concerned with agricultural development in the Middle East.

In the latter part of the year grants were offered by the Rockefeller Foundation and Barclays Bank International Development Fund which went a long way towards providing the necessary amount to match the major grant already offered by the Overseas Development Administration for three years from April 1972.

Although the Kenya and Nigeria field studies remain to be completed, the balance of work over the next two years is expected to shift towards the collection of more material from outside the field-work areas, towards more analysis, and towards more publication, both of field results and probably of some monographs, reviewing material on special subjects. A book based on the Indian work is planned for autumn 1973 and a workshop will be held at the Institute of Development Studies, University of Sussex, in September to re-examine the validity of the central hypotheses of the programme.

Donor policies: General

A survey of the international development scene was included in ODI Review 5, published in April 1972. In addition to the regular appraisal of British policies and performance, this Review also contained similar articles on the United States and the Netherlands. ODI Review 6, again edited by Bruce Dinwiddy, will appear in May 1973. It will contain articles on British policy and on the international development effort by the Editor. There will be outside contributions on two other important donors: France (by Yves Berthelot) and Sweden (by Göran Ohlin). Also from outside ODI, Brian Johnson will be contributing an article on the multilateral system. And there will be three other articles from ODI staff members: Guy Hunter on some basic issues of income distribution within developing countries; Kathryn Morton on the various financial flows between Britain and developing countries; and Peter Tulloch on the EEC and agricultural exports from developing countries.

During 1972 ODI published the report of a working party jointly sponsored by Christian Aid and the Catholic Fund for Overseas Development. Entitled A Third Force for the Third World, it was concerned with the channels for the investment of church trust funds in economic development. Although written primarily in a British context, the report makes proposals which will no doubt be studied by trustees of church funds in other donor countries.

The first draft of George Cunningham’s comparative study of aid administration in the major donor countries was considered by the project Steering Committee in the autumn of 1972. A revised version is now being prepared, and it is hoped that this will be ready to go to press by the middle of 1973.
British aid and development policy

ODI contributed substantially to Britain's Role in the Second Development Decade, published in April by the UK Standing Conference on the Second Development Decade. This report was the outcome of a working party, which ODI sponsored together with the Society for International Development (UK Chapter). Antony Tasker, the Director, was Co-Chairman with Paul Streeten; Kathryn Morton as rapporteur had primary responsibility for drafting the report. Professor Ian Little, an ODI Council member, also served on the working party, as did two other members of ODI staff, Guy Hunter and Robert Wood.

The research on British aid to Malawi, Botswana, Lesotho, and Swaziland, financed by the Social Science Research Council, made substantial progress during the year. Kathryn Morton began work on the Malawi study in April; after consultation with the project Steering Committee, and preliminary research in London she went on a twelve-week field trip to Malawi at the end of August. A further short visit may be made in 1973. It is intended to hold the final meeting of the Steering Committee in April, and to deliver the manuscript to the printer in June. David Jones joined the staff in October from the Ministry of Economic Affairs and Development Planning, Tanzania, to carry out the study on Botswana, Lesotho, and Swaziland. He presented a background paper to the project Steering Committee in December. With the permission of the SSRC, he is devoting the first four months of 1973 to preparing a pamphlet on the European Development Fund (see below, EEC Policy Studies). He expects to pay his first visit to Botswana, Lesotho, and Swaziland in mid-1973.

Andrzej Krassowski completed the first draft of his short study on the Overseas Development Administration’s Development Divisions. The final version will be ready in 1973.

EEC policy studies

In addition to the chapter on Developing Countries and the Enlargement of the EEC which he contributed to ODI Review 5, Peter Tulloch finished his study on the effects of EEC enlargement upon Commonwealth Asia's exports. This was published in March 1973, under the title The Seven Outside.

During the year finance was obtained from the Nuffield Foundation, the SSRC, and the Overseas Development Administration for a study of EEC policy-making vis-à-vis developing countries. This is also being undertaken by Peter Tulloch. Work began before the end of the year, and the manuscript is scheduled to go to press by the end of 1973.

At the request of ODA two further research schemes were submitted during December 1972, and have subsequently been approved and funded. Both relate to the negotiations between the Nine, the Yaoundé Associates, and the Commonwealth associables which are due to begin in the third quarter of 1973. One, on the European Development Fund, is being undertaken by David Jones. The other, concerning the influence of the Common Agricultural Policy upon the terms of access for the exports of Associates and associables, is being carried out by John Marsh, Christopher Ritson, and Frank Ellis of Reading University. We plan to publish the results in the middle of 1973.

African studies

Bruce Dinwiddy made a seven-week study tour, principally covering Ghana, Kenya, Malawi, and Swaziland in connection with his research into African entrepreneurship. His draft report was discussed at a meeting of the project working party in December. Subsequent revision will be delayed by editorial work on Review 6. But the final version will be completed in the spring of 1973.

Andrzej Krassowski’s final revision of his study of Ghana’s use of external resources was finished by the end of 1972.

Both studies will be published by Groom Helm during 1973.

2 Other staff activities

Articles and briefing papers

ODI staff contributed a number of articles to various journals during the year, including one article to The Times Supplement (December) on Europe and the Third World: ‘Agricultural trade after the summit’ by Peter Tulloch, who also wrote two further articles; in The Guardian (March) ‘Beating out a square deal in trade for the Third World’ and in Venture (June) ‘UNCTAD—dialogue of the deaf again?’. Among other articles was, in Ceres (January-February), ‘Some western transplants yield strange fruits’ by Guy Hunter. Several book reviews by members of the staff appeared, including in VOSA Newsletter (September), ‘Development Economics’ by Jonathan Power, reviewed by Bruce Dinwiddy; in Journal of Administration Overseas (July) ‘Two Blades of Grass—Rural Co-operatives in Agricultural Modernization’ edited by Briefing papers were prepared on the problems and prospects of UNCTAD III; on the Government's decision to introduce exchange controls on transactions with the Overseas Sterling Area; and on the EEC Summit Meeting.

Co-operation with other organizations
The Institute maintained active co-operation with organizations working in similar fields. Staff members served on a number of committees, editorial and governing boards, including British Council, British Volunteer Programme, Christian Aid, Overseas Investment Committee of the Confederation of British Industry, Disaster Aid Working Party, Farnham Castle (Centre for International Briefing), Institute of Development Studies (Sussex), Population and Science and Technology Policy Working Parties, Royal Africa Society, Secretary of State's Committee on UN Affairs, Society for International Development, UK Standing Conference on the Second UN Development Decade, Voluntary Committee on Overseas Aid and Development, Voluntary Service Overseas.

Talks and broadcasts
ODI staff undertook speaking engagements during the year for the Alfred Marshall Society of Bristol University, Civil Service College, Commonwealth Institute, Council for Education in World Citizenship, Federal Trust, Tropical Products Institute, Voluntary Service Overseas, War on Want, Wilton Park, and the World Development Movement.

Contributions to the BBC Overseas Service included a talk on 'Social effects of the Green Revolution' and interviews on UNCTAD III and trade prospects for the less developed countries. Other talks were given for the BBC Caribbean Service and for the Australian Broadcasting Commission.

3 Conferences, meetings and seminars
A conference on 'The Adaptation of Administration and Institutions to Changing Levels of Agricultural Development' was held in New Delhi in December. It was co-sponsored by the Ministry of Agriculture, Government of India, and Reading/ODI, and focused on research undertaken as part of the Reading University/ODI Joint Programme for Agricultural Development Overseas. Six detailed studies were presented by Indian scholars and Guy Hunter contributed the Introduction and Background Paper. The conference was formally opened by the Indian Minister of Agriculture and chaired by the Secretary of the Ministry. In addition to Indian government officials and academics, there were four British participants (Professor Hugh Bunting of Reading University, Mr. Peter Stutley from the Overseas Development Administration, and Guy Hunter with Anthony Bottrall from ODI) and the Commonwealth Foundation sponsored the attendance of four delegates from Kenya and Nigeria. Arrangements are being made to edit and publish the research papers and conference proceedings.

ODI staff took part in a number of other conferences in Britain and overseas during the year. The Director attended an international meeting in Belgrade, sponsored by OECD and IBRD, for directors of Development Research and Training Institutes, and also participated in a meeting arranged by the Commonwealth Foundation for Overseas Committees of British Universities, and a conference for West European Voluntary Agencies, organized by the Voluntary Committee on Overseas Aid and Development, and led a panel discussion at a session of the UK Standing Conference on the Second UN Development Decade. He also attended with the Director of Studies a seminar at the Institute of Development Studies for the directors of Development Research Institutes. The Director of Studies, as a Group Convenor, took part in the Cambridge Conference on Trade and Development; he also attended the UNITAR conference on 'The Search for New Methods of Technical Co-operation' and a seminar on 'Aid Policy and Employment' sponsored by the Institute of Development Studies and the Overseas Development Administration of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. Anthony Bottrall attended a seminar at Loughborough Co-operative College on 'Co-operatives in Developing Countries'. Bruce Dinwiddy participated as a speaker in the Voluntary Overseas Service Association national conference at Oxford. Guy Hunter introduced a paper at a meeting on rural development, jointly sponsored by the OECD Development Centre and IBRD in Paris; he also participated in the Agricultural Economic Association annual conference on agricultural development held at Bad Godesberg, and the Institute of Development Studies seminar on 'Education Policy Overseas'. Andrzej Krassowski took part in the European Monetary Union conference at the Royal Commonwealth Society. Kathryn Morton, as a member of one of the panels, participated in a conference on ‘Britain’s Role in the Second Development Decade’ organized by the UK Standing Conference on the Second UN Development Decade. Peter Tulloch attended a Federal Trust conference on ‘Developing Commonwealth Countries and the Enlargement of the EEC’, and also participated in the Cambridge Conference on Trade and Development, a conference on ‘India and the EEC’ organized by the Royal Institute of International Affairs, and a summer school jointly sponsored by the Voluntary Committee on Overseas Aid and Development and the Workers Educational Association.

Discussion meetings held at ODI included ‘Japan’s Approach to UNCTAD III’, introduced by Professor Kiyoshi Kojima, Hititsubashi University, Tokyo; ‘The Prospects for Commonwealth Developing Countries after EEC Enlargement’, introduced by Mr. Gerhard Schiitler, Directorate-General for Development Aid, European Communities’ Commission, Brussels; ‘Agriculture and Employment in Developing Countries’, introduced by Mr. Montague Yudelman, Vice-President OECD Development Centre; ‘A Post-Mortem on UNCTAD III’, introduced by Ambassador Edwin M. Martin, Chairman, Development Assistance Committee, OECD; ‘Manufactured Exports and Multinational Firms: Their Impact upon Economic Development’, introduced by Professor G. K. Helleiner, Visiting Fellow, Institute of Development Studies, Sussex; ‘Developing Countries, Trade and Liquidity: A New Approach’, introduced by Michael and Frances Stewart; and ‘EEC Enlargement and Regional Co-operation in Africa’, introduced by Professor Kjeld Philip, of the Danish Board for Technical Co-operation with Developing Countries.

Visitors to ODI during the year included representatives of the Atomic Energy Research Establishment, Association de la Science Politique Européenne (ADESPE), Canadian Council for International Co-operation, Danish Board for Technical Co-operation with Developing Countries, Development Assistance Committee OECD, Ford Foundation, IBRD, ILO, Institute of Social Studies (The Hague), Overseas Development Council (Washington), UNCTAD, UNDP, UNIDO, USAID; and individual visitors from Australia, Botswana, Canada, Cyprus, Eire, France, Germany, Ghana, India, Kenya, Malawi, Nigeria, St. Kitts, South Africa, Swaziland, and the USA.

4 Library and information

Books and pamphlets in the Library now total 8,500 volumes dealing with all aspects of aid and development in the Third World. In addition to commercially published books, the stock contains documents from major international organizations such as the United Nations and its agencies, and from governments. Many publications are received on an exchange basis with related institutions.

The subject section covers general economics of development aid, finance, foreign trade, agriculture, population problems, and the institutional and sociological aspects of development. The regional section contains material on specific regions and countries, with special emphasis on economic surveys and development plans. Another section is concerned with the aid programmes of individual countries and organizations. The reference section contains, apart from general reference books, directories and reports of organizations active in the field of aid and development, conference papers, international statistics, and bibliographies.

The documents are supplemented by files of newspaper cuttings, press releases, references to periodical articles and similar material, arranged according to subject and/or country.

About 200 periodicals are received regularly. They form the basis of a monthly Periodical Review, a check list of articles on aid and development arranged according to subject and/or country. When Parliament is in session, the Review also provides details of questions, discussions, and statements on aid and trade in Parliament, taken from Hansard (the official daily report of debates in the House of Commons). The Review is sent to subscribers (annual subscription £2.00) or to other organizations on an exchange basis.

The Library is chiefly designed to serve the requirements of the staff, and its collections therefore reflect the research undertaken by the Institute. However, the Library is used by a growing number of students, members of voluntary organizations and others concerned with development. (Books are for reference only and cannot be lent out.) Requests for information are dealt with wherever possible. Library hours are from 10 am to 6 pm, Mondays to Fridays.

5 ODI Fellowships

1972 was a notable year for this scheme under which young development economists serve for two years with African governments. It saw the start of the new arrangements under which the scheme is financed by a grant from the Overseas Development Administration, while continuing to be administered by ODI. It was the tenth year of its operation, yet saw the highest number of Fellowships (14) awarded in one year. And for the first time the successful candidates included two women, both of whom are now serving in Ministries of Agriculture, in Malawi and Swaziland.

The total of Fellowships awarded since the inception of the scheme in 1963 is now 87. 24 former Fellows are still working in developing countries, either under direct contract with governments or with other agencies.

Arrangements are in hand for another group of Fellows to be appointed in 1973. A list of all ODI Fellows, with brief details of their initial and subsequent appointments, is given in the Appendix.
